out of work for seven weeks, and it is possible that the Manufacturers' Association may disband on account of it.

"On the one point, of the opportunity of a worker to be reinstated, if he is unjustly discharged, we will fight it out till doomsday."

This is the feeling expressed by Benjamin Schlesinger, head of the striking workers, and his associates, especially since wages and hours of work are issues that both sides agree are easily settled.

As has been stated in these columns, considerable resentment has been aroused among prominent members of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers Association over the seemingly irrevocable stand taken by those in charge of the strike.

In this day of enlightened opinion as to the rights of workers in connection with "collective bargaining" and belonging to a "union," the attitude taken by the Committee of Manufacturers handling the matter is designated as being "behind the times" by people close to the conditions.

They (the manufacturers) demand that they should give no opportunity for reinstatement of a worker whom they have discharged, regardless of whether the discharge was just or unjust.
The workers insist that this is the very foundation upon which their "collective bargaining" is based.

Although it is possible for the workers to consider modifications of this matter, they deem it of paramount importance that only an impartial Chairman shall decide whether or not a worker shall be reinstated if he is unjustly discharged, and are willing to submit their case to any impartial Chairman selected by both sides.

Manufacturers don't want an impartial Chairman to decide this. Although they want to employ the workers of the union and recognize "union activity" and "collective bargaining," they won't even call a conference unless this point is decided beforehand.

This stand taken by the Dress and Waist Makers' Association is in direct contrast to the one of the latest decisions adopted in a similar trade, namely, in the strike last month of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

This point of reinstatement was drumily fixed in favor of the workers, and went even further than that requested by the present strikers.

It provided that not only was reinstatement a matter for the decision of an impartial Chairman, but a worker could not even be completely discharged without such a hearing.

This arrangement was made upon the decision of an Advisory Board created for the purpose. This board consisted of such well known men as Prof. William Z. Ripley, Prof. Felix Frankfurter and Louis Marshall, the attorney.

This matter of arbitration to settle disputes between the employer and the employee, including the subject of reinstatement, is similar to that of the Typographical Union's, and is one that is generally recognized in every industry where recent agreements have been made.

The decision arrived at by the above three members of the Advisory Board, and which was the basis of the agreement, after the strike of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, in connection with the reinstatement of a worker, is as follows:

"(a) The employer shall in each shop maintain a complaint book in which shall be entered all complaints against employees, who shall severally be informed of all entries made therein against them, and shall have an opportunity to be heard with respect thereto before the employment agent whenever he shall be thereunto requested.

"(b) No worker shall be suspended by the employer during working hours, except in aggravated instances, and then only upon agreement to that effect between one of the executive officers of the union and the employment agent.

"(c) In all other cases, an employer desiring to discharge an employee shall first give to the latter notice in writing of his intention so to do, with a brief statement of the reasons therefor.

"(d) A duplicate of such notice and statement shall be immediately lodged with the employment agent, who shall within twenty-four hours thereafter give a hearing to the parties concerned, and who shall, in the meantime, seek to conciliate the parties.

"(e) If the employment agent shall be of the opinion that the facts presented on such hearing constitute probable cause for discipline, he may, in cases of sufficient gravity, and with the sanction of the impartial Chairman, suspend the worker from employment.

"(f) In any case either party may appeal to the impartial Chairman from the decision of the employment agent.

"(g) In the event of a suspension of an employee in the manner aforesaid the impartial Chairman may, if after hearing the appeal he shall decide that the suspension was unwarranted, direct that the employee shall be reinstated with full pay for the time lost by him in consequence of such suspension."

Detectives Say Murphy Confessed, Explaining He Needed Money to Buy "Dope."

A man who told the police of the Raiph Avenue Station, Brooklyn, he is Robert Murphy, thirty, of No. 132 Somers Street, was arrested last night by Detectives Farrington and Thorn. ton of that station, charged with robbing the apartments of Mrs. Mabel Prenneke and Mrs. Mary Garvin, No.

123 Broadway, Brooklyn, of cut glass and jewelry.

The detectives said Murphy was about to pawn some of the loot and that he had two hypodermic needles in a pocket. They also said a paper signed with the name of Dr. B. B.
Pitt, No. 39 Stanton Street, Manhattan, showing he treated Murphy for tectives say Murphy confessed, explaining he needed money to buy
